

PRIVACY POLICY

Introduction

Ethical Influence Limited commits to protecting the privacy of its clients and visitors to its website. The statement below describes how we collect and use personal information provided to us.

Collection and use of Information

Personal information is collected from users who register on the website, or use the online form or who subscribe to newsletters etc. The information collected will typically include, but may not be limited to, name, company name, email address and company position. We also retain the information of clients and potential clients who we are in contact with us through email. This information is treated by us as strictly confidential. We will not pass this information to any third party unless explicit permission to do so has been provided, or it is legally required. We will ensure that any personal information we hold is held securely and in accordance with relevant Data Protection legislation. We will from time to time contact you for the purposes which you have consented to receive information from us. You may choose to remove consent to receive such communications at any point by notifying us. The website logs anonymous information from visitors to the website to facilitate analysis of web traffic. The type of information collected is duration of visit, type of browser used etc.

Other websites

Any links to other websites do not imply any validation and Ethical Influence Limited is not responsible for the privacy policies or content of these websites.

Reviewed May 2018